

DR IRENE ROCHLITZ

Irene is a veterinarian and associated with the Centre for Animal Welfare and Anthrozoology at the University of Cambridge. She has a Master's degree in Veterinary Oncology and a PhD in Feline Welfare. She has experience of working in veterinary practice as well as teaching and research on issues affecting companion animals, in particular domestic cats.

Her interests include companion animal behaviour, the assessment of quality of life in companion animals, animal ethics and shelter medicine. She is the editor and co-author of the book "The Welfare of Cats", published by Springer (2005). In April 2005 the British Small Animal Veterinary Association presented her with the J.A.Wight Memorial award, for contributions to companion animal welfare.
