

MIKE RADFORD OBE

Reader in Law, University of Aberdeen

Mike Radford joined the School in September 2000 from the University of East Anglia. His interests focus on law and the exercise of power in two distinct areas: government and public administration; and the treatment of animals. He is presently a Council member of the Universities Federation for Animal Welfare; an academic adviser to the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons; a committee member of the Animal Science, Ethics and Law Veterinary Association; and a member of the Companion Animal Welfare Council.

Mike has written widely on aspects of animal welfare law and lectured extensively on the subject both in the UK and abroad. Mike's book "Animal Welfare Law in Britain" was recently published by the Oxford University Press. He is currently engaged on a research project funded by the RSPCA and the revision of the 'Animals' section of Halsburys Laws of England.
